Family Note

Your child has been learning to model "take-away" (subtraction) problems with real objects. For this activity, take all the aces, 2s, and 3s from a deck of cards and shuffle them. Or make 1, 2, and 3 number cards—four cards for each number—out of paper. Your child can help you find or make the cards.

Make two lines of 20 pieces of small snacks, such as fish crackers, cereal, or raisins—a line for you and a line for your partner.

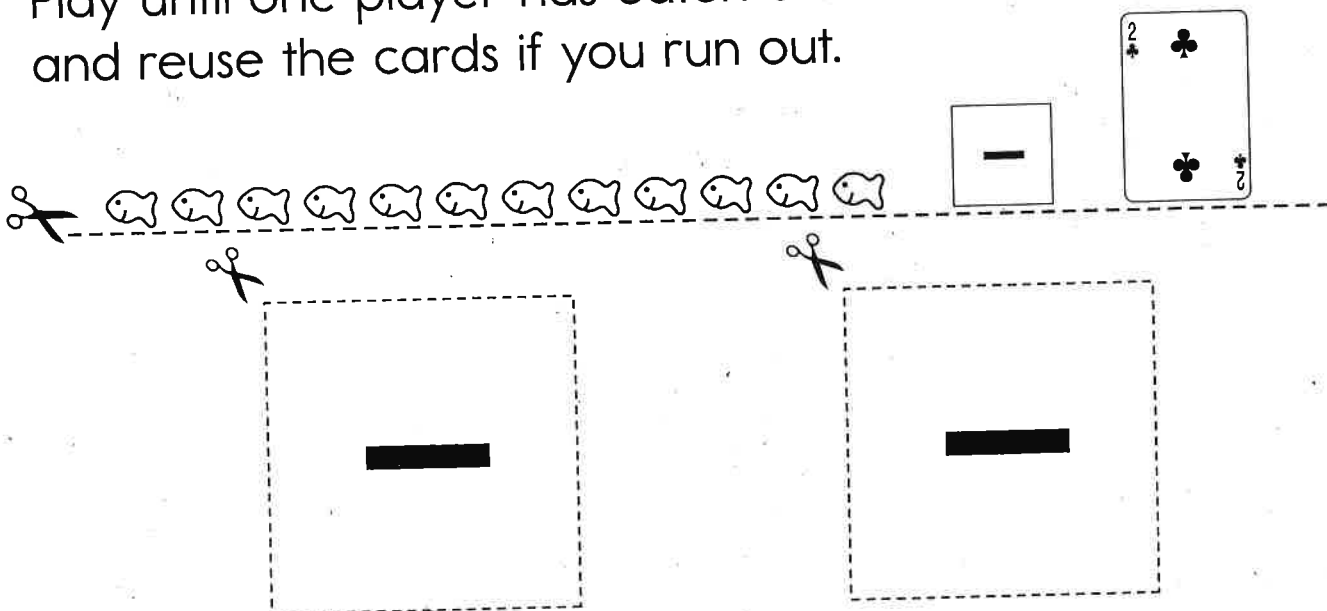

Cut out the subtraction symbols (−) and place them to the right of each snack line.

Players take turns drawing a number card, laying it to the right of their subtraction symbol, and subtracting (eating) that number from their "snack train."

After each turn, compare the trains:

Which has more snacks? Which has fewer?

Play until one player has eaten all their snacks. Shuffle and reuse the cards if you run out.

In the Community

Then

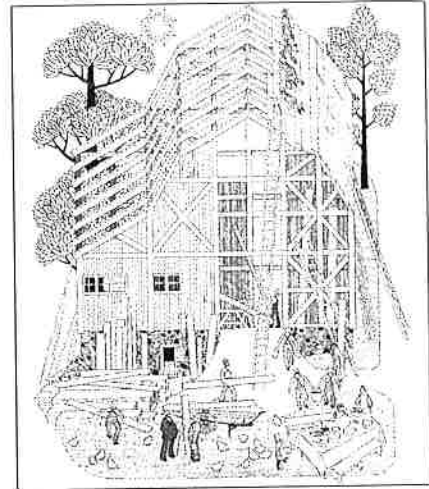

People had lots of work to do. They helped each other.

quilting bee

cornhusking bee

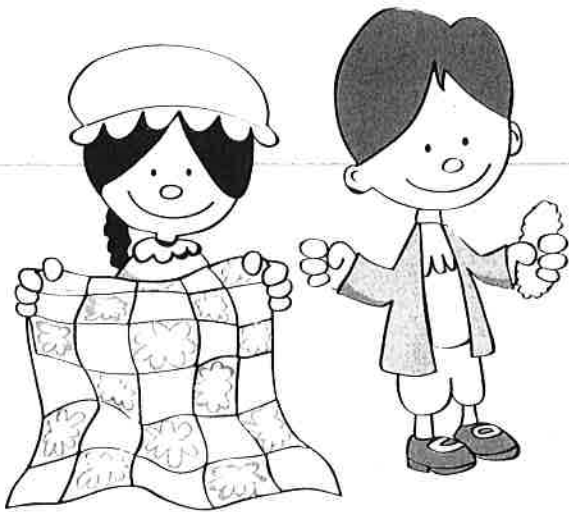

barn raising

Now

Today, people help each other in different ways.

In the past, courts helped make sure people followed the rules and laws. Just like they do today.
